What: A one-day basic training program "Win With The Media" Public safety officers and their departments can with the media; this training shows you how. (If your Homeland Security crisis preparedness plan doesn't include preparation for the media, you're not ready). You will learn how to deal with reporters in a wide range of circumstances from routine day-to-day inquiries to challenging interviews and many media contacts in between. This is practical training, not theoretical; what you learn will work for you on the street, right away. Topics include: taking back your share of the First Amendment; "feeding the animals"; controlling the media at incident scenes, effective interview techniques; talking in effective sound bites and much, much more. Students get an in-depth, inside look at how and why the media do what they do, and learn how to take charge of reporters rather than being victimized by them. Two dozen videos illustrate key teaching points, informing and entertaining the class: you will learn valuable strategies and tactics, and you will have doing it! The bottom line: this training helps public safety officers become far more comfortable and effective with the media, teaches and useful media skills and controls, and enables you to enjoy better media relations and better public relations.

Who should attend: This training is not just for PIO's. All public safety officers who serve in a supervisory capacity and may have contact with the media will benefit from this training. This includes police and fire chiefs, deputy chiefs, sheriff's and undersheriff's, captains, lieutenants, sergeants, watch commanders, shift supervisors, on-scene incident commanders and public information officers.

How Much: $165 per person $150 p/p if two or more enroll from the same agency. Payment is requested by the time of training. Checks should be made to RAR Communications, Inc. Late cancellations and or no shows will incur a service charge of $100.00 per person. See enrollment form
