HOW TO IDENTIFY

Most cigarette packaging has the letters “FSC” near the Universal Product Code (UPC). All cartons, boxes, and packages will be labeled. Identification includes:

- The marking “FSC” (most common)
- A heavy black line above the UPC
- A diamond symbol
- A forward slash or asterick
- The letters FS, LIP, NYS or RIP

EDUCATING THE PUBLIC

Manufacturers and wholesalers – Many actively participated in legislation and internally prepared for both production and distribution to meet timelines. They are responsible to provide each retailer with examples of packaging markings to indicate that cigarettes are fire safer. In June of 2007, a letter from the Oregon Dept of Justice was sent to wholesalers advising that manufacturers, as of July 1, 2007, could only sell fire safer cigarettes to Oregon wholesalers. This provided time for wholesalers and retailers to reduce non-compliant product until December 31, 2007.

Retailers – All cigarette brands need markings to indicate they are fire standard compliant cigarettes. These are provided by manufacturers and wholesalers selling to retailers. The Oregon Department of Revenue and the Oregon Department of Justice also regulate cigarettes in Oregon. Retailers need to make sure they fulfill their requirements as well.

Consumers – Consumers should feel comfortable knowing the cigarettes they buy are fire safer. For any concerns, contact the Office of State Fire Marshal.

Media – Media actively participated in promoting the news from legislation to implementation of this new law. Their visible efforts have increased public awareness of changes in Oregon’s law to sell only self-extinguishing cigarettes, which will reduce the number of fires, injuries, and fire deaths caused by cigarettes. They have also actively targeted the responsibilities of those manufacturing and selling cigarettes in Oregon.

FINES

Manufacturers & Wholesalers:

$10,000 or five times the wholesale invoice cost of the cigarettes.

Retailers:

$500 when selling up to 1,000 cigarettes
$1000 or five times the retail value (whichever is greater) when selling more than 1,000 cigarettes.

Violators may be fined separately for each day they sell non-compliant cigarettes.
