The CCO has a plan for using sexual orientation data to identify and address disparities once the data is available.

  - (i) Directly relate to the relevant component to address the gaps identified for each project's population; and
  - (ii) The CCO reasonably believes the project activities will demonstrate significant and meaningful CCO actions throughout the year to move the project forward in a reasonable amount of time; and
  - (iii) Are specific, measurable, achievable, realistic, and time bound.

- 5. The CCO will assess improvement based on the planned project activities utilizing identified monitoring measures that meet all the following requirements:
  - (i) Each project activity has at least one monitoring measure.
  - (ii) For each monitoring measure, dates have been identified for determining whether the applicable target (short-term goal) and benchmark (longer-term goal) have been met.
  - (iii) For monitoring measures that use member-level data for measuring improvement, such data will be disaggregated by REALD & GI categories in the analysis and tracking to show whether there has been progress in reducing REALD & GI disparities at the member level.
  - (iv) For a project that is continuing from the prior year, the targets and benchmarks have been updated for the current year.
