5 SMART WAYS TO USE SOCIAL MEDIA IN YOUR JOB SEARCH

1

Use Facebook, Twitter, and LinkedIn to Network Your Way Into a Job.

Everyone's talking about using social media for job hunting. But how, exactly, should you do that? Here are 10 smart and strategic ways to network your way into a job using three popular online tools: Facebook, Twitter, and LinkedIn.

I've updated my #resume and I'm looking for a job in materials engineering or science public policy: http://bit.ly/____Resume

Let people know you're looking. Whether on LinkedIn, Facebook, or Twitter, let your friends and followers know that you're looking for a job. Even better, tell them what type of job you're looking for. They may not know of any openings right now, but if they know you're available, they'll think of you when a position opens up. That will help you hear about openings before they're listed on popular job boards.

2

Don't be afraid to network on Facebook.

Facebook may be for fun, but don't make the mistake of overlooking your network there, especially if you already have hundreds of friends. Facebook can sometimes be more useful for job hunting than LinkedIn, because friends who know you personally have more of a stake in helping you. They want you to succeed—so use that to your advantage.

Find information about hiring managers.

Before you submit your resume, look up the hiring manager on LinkedIn and Twitter. (If he's smart, he'll make his Facebook profile private.) LinkedIn profiles and Twitter feeds are gold mines of information on individuals. Knowing more about the person who's hiring can help you tailor your cover letter to their needs and desires.

4

Create the connections you need to get the job.

It's all about who you know, right? Don't just use the connections you already have. Figure out who you need to know to land a certain job—likely the hiring manager—and make that connection, whether by getting them to follow you on Twitter by retweeting their tweets, or growing your LinkedIn network until they become a third-degree connection. Twitter in particular offers opportunity to connect with professionals who might not otherwise give you the time of day.
